

20260424 On How to Fix Iran

Since it has become painfully obvious that our world leaders are unable to solve this clusterfuck on their own, I will offer them some much needed guidance.

In order to fix the situation in Iran, you must treat Iran with the same light-touch, and respectful attitude, that you would treat any other very powerful nation. For reference, treat Iran's actions in the exact same manner that you would treat those actions if they were done by China itself.

Would you threaten and bombard China in the same way that you did Iran?

How would you handle the situation differently if China was taking the exact same steps that Iran is taking?

Ok, now go on and fix this problem with diplomatic solutions, ~~tariffs~~¹ economic sanctions, and respectful dialogue.

This war of proving how big your twig and berries have grown is not going to solve it this time, old man.

In fact, it is high-time that you took some time away from the buffoonery, the puffery, and the disrespect of everyone in general.

You're headed to the Correspondent's Dinner to dish out some zingers?

Prepare yourself for a long match of crickets.

¹ You've already proven yourself to be too selfishly stupid to use 'tariffs' to enact foreign policy. Seriously, what a fucking dud you turned out to be. If we wanted to elect a two-bit mob boss, we would have done that. We thought we were electing a respectable business person and you proved yourself to be anything but . . . literally. . . an ass of a man chasing after anything with a butt that you'd like to . . . screw over for your own personal benefits.